A BALL GAME.

Is the Only Thing That Will Take District Attorney Hudson Away From His Desk.

UNION TOWN, May 10.—District Attorney Hudson is hard at work. He is in his office every morning and afternoon, most of the time interrogating witnesses and mounting cases to the witnesses and preparing cases to be tried at the June term. Indications are that the criminal list will be exceptionally heavy at this session. Mr. Hudson was seen by a reporter this morning, who desired to ask about matters in connection with "Awfully sorry," remarked Mr. Hudson, "but really, I haven't time to talk too long. Nothing can get me away from this desk now but a good ball game."

As the court is also imbued with the same spirit it is said that a movement to postpone the session until after (Monday) goes away for a week or two would meet with manifestations of delight.

Largest Acreage Ever Deeded In This Section—Purchasers Will Be Third Largest Producers in the Pittsburg District—Will Make Coke on an Extensive Scale.

J. V. Thompson, the Uniontown banker, has made some big coal deals, but he never made a bigger deal for a bigger acreage than the one he delivered yesterday to the Pittsburgh, Westmoreland and Coal Companies conveying to the latter 131 tracts of coal in Washington and Greene counties containing 10,599 acres for the consideration, in round numbers, of $2,500,000. The price paid was $248 per acre.

The conveyance contains the names of 57 people, principal among whom are J. V. Thompson, Isaac W. Semans, George B. Hays, John T. Robinson, John R. Thompson, Joseph S. and Charles J. McCormick. The deed itself is an ornate bit of the scrivener's art. It consists of 304 typewritten pages bound in Russia leather and resplendent with gilt lettering. It will be recorded in both Washington and Greene counties and the fees for this work will be unusual in those

This vast body of Pittsburg coking coal is as big as an ordinary township, its area being nearly seventeen square miles. It lies principally in Anwell and West Bethlehem townships, Washington county, but extends into Washington township, Greene county. It embraces the larger portion of the southern halves of the Washington county townships mentioned. It is the purpose of the purchaser to develop the coal at once. Coking operations will be established in connection with the mines. Shipping facilities will be afforded by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's "loop" to be built this summer from Vin Elmin station on the Chartiers Valley railroad up Little Chartiers creek to the summit and down Big Daniels run to a point near Zollarsville, where connection will be made with the Monacaetha Division. This "loop" runs nearly north and south. The Waynesburg & Washington narrow gauge also skirts the tract on the westward, while the Pennsylvania branch to Monacaetha up Pleasant creek to Monacaetha operations is within easy reach. The tract adjoins the Pittsburg-Butte holdings and extends south to J. V. Thompson's extensive holdings in Greene county.

This acreage will make the company the third largest coal producers in the Pittsburgh region. The company has a present capital of $3,000,000 and already owns between 17,000 and 18,000 acres of coal land in Washington and Westmoreland counties, with seven producing mines having an output of 2,000,000 tons annually. About 600,000 tons are produced in the Irwin basin, Westmoreland county, and the remainder in Washington county near Monongahela City, two of the mines being located on the Monongahela river. The company is financed by rail and street bonds. The officers of the company are: President, H. C. Feltz;

Chairman of the Board, D. W. Kuhn; Vice Presidents, C. P. Berth of New York, and E. E. Robbins of Greensburg; Treasurer, H. A. Andrews; Secretary, Samuel A. Davis. The headquarters of the company are in Pittsburgh, with offices in the Fulton building, H. A. and D. W. Kuhn, who are at the head of the concern, are cousins of James S. and William S. Kuhn, prominently identified with Connelleville and of course, many others.

The geology of the coal is described in the United States Geological Survey's report on the Anity Quadrangle. This quadrangle adjoins the Brownsville Quadrangle on the east and the Waplesburg Quadrangle on the south. The Anity Quadrangle is entirely underlaid with the Pittsburg seam.

The Pittsburg-Westmoreland Company coal is low in sulphur and an excellent article of coke can be made from it.

The coal lies about 300 feet from the surface and will have to be mined by shafts. The vein varies from 6 to 8 feet, but, owing to some partings but 4 to 6 feet are mined. The geological report says concerning this: "The characteristic features of this division consists of two very persistent partings, which as a rule occur two to three feet from the bottom. They are known as the bearing-in bands, and with the coal between them make up the bearing-in coal. In few places are they over half an inch thick; commonly they are much thinner. The interval between them

If You Don't Get Good Cigars
Now, It's Your Own Fault

All you have to do is to stand up like a man and ask the dealer for cigars identified by the "Triangle A" on the box.

Nothing else.
Nothing easier.
Nothing surer.

When you say "Give me a 'Triangle A' cigar," you are absolutely as certain of getting quality, and the same quality every time, no matter which particular brand you select, as if you had your cigars made up to order.

We have succeeded in building up a fifteen per cent. share of the entire cigar business of this country. In the face of the keenest competition, take notice. You know well enough that there's only one way we could have done it:

Simply by making better cigars of every grade than any other manufacturer has produced and telling the truth about them.

And by making the strongest definite claims that any cigar manufacturer ever dared to make, and living up to them.

The one reason why we started in marking our boxes with the "Triangle A" was to enable you to shut down sharp on the common hit-or-miss way of buying cigars on somebody's say-so, and make your selection with your eyes open.

It would be worth your while to take all sorts of trouble in order to obtain "Triangle A" brands—but you don't have to bother—you can get them anywhere.

It's up to you to ask for them.
Practically every dealer in the United States carries them.

Do your part!
Give yourself a square deal!

This "Triangle A" merit mark identifies the product of the most modern improved methods and scientific processes of cigar production, and represents a standard of quality far superior to that which the same price could heretofore purchase.

If you have been buying your cigars by guess-work and want to put our claims to a most practical test, just take a new start. Begin by smoking one of the best-known of all the brands that are sold under the guarantee of the "Triangle A"—

The New CREMO

Compare it fairly with any cigar sold at the same price that carries no "Triangle A" guarantee.—you won't fail to see why we are so confident of your co-operation as soon as you realize just what the "Triangle A" stands for.

Every box is now extra-wrapped in glassine paper, sealed at each end with the "Triangle A" in red. The cigars are kept clean, fresh and in perfect smoking condition until the box is opened.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 10, 1907.

THE FIRST FRUITS

OF THE SOWERS OF DISCORD.

The announcement of Democratic candidates for Sheriff and District Attorney of Fayette county was expected. There is always enough ambition to lead a forlorn hope.

But the candidates who announced this week are not the persons who are in the habit of leading forlorn hopes. On the contrary, they have the reputation of playing a sure game. In politics, to use a term not unfamiliar to Uniontown, they are "out for blood," which is to say that they are out for office and the emoluments thereof, and not for the mere honor of a nomination. The fact that they are in the fight to win, indeed, is significant.

It means that the sowers of discord within the Republican party have succeeded in arousing a dormant Democratic ambition. These ambitions are not vain. The candidates are not rain-bow chasers. They are shrewd politicians. They have closely observed the frenzied "independence" of the Uniontown Herald, and they hope to profit by its attempts to disrupt the party.

If it be true that the work of this paper is inspired by Republicans such Republicans will have much to answer for. The people who vote the Republican ticket and are disinterestedly for Republican success have no sympathy with those who would sacrifice the party for the gratification of their political ambitions.

SHOULD BE ABOVE SUSPICION.

Percy H. Wilson of Norfolk-by-Jamestown knows a lot about the connection of the quarrymen of the Pennsylvania State Capitol building with the Graft Syndicate, and Percy is "anxious" to tell the investigating committee all about it; but he is so busy that he can't find time to come to Harrisburg, and the obliging investigators have appointed a sub-committee to go to Norfolk-by-Jamestown to take his testimony.

It perhaps never occurred to the committee that Percy might have met them at Harrisburg, where at Washington, with only the loss of business of a day, which he and they would have to lose no matter where Percy's testimony is taken. The committee could have traveled in a Pullman palace car to Washington one evening and returned next evening. Percy could have traveled on a palatial steamboat from Norfolk to Washington one night and returned the next. It looks as if the Jamestown Exposition is to be investigated as well as the State Capitol.

The members of the investigating committee, like Caesar's wife, should be above suspicion even in small things.

A BAD MAN

FROM MUD ISLAND.

Colonel William Make-noise. Likins is thoroughly convinced that we are wicked and unregenerate because we have not joined the Sabbath observance shouters and stood out against the theory that beer clubs are more numerous in licensed towns than they are in prohibitory communities.

As to the latter, Editor Likins declares that in Connelville beer clubs are "as thick as jack rabbits." If they are no thicker, they are very scarce. Jack rabbits are not plentiful in this town.

But Brother Likins insists that there are many beer clubs here; that some of them are "high toned;" and that these are the kind the editor of this paper frequents. This is a sad mistake. We don't belong to or frequent any beer club or any other similar club in Connelville. The only club of this kind we ever did belong to broke up a couple of years ago. The members didn't eat and drink enough to make it self-sustaining. At present the only clubs in which we have membership are The Courier club, where we are the boss, and the Home club, where father is only the Lieutenant Governor. We trust that Colonel Likins will respect this humiliating confession from us in self-defense against his reckless and monstrous charges.

Aside from these fraternal organizations, there are no beer clubs or other clubs in Connelville furnishing liquors to their members within our knowledge or information, and we believe there are no more. How many there are in Uniontown we do not know. The only club we have ever frequented there furnishes no liquid refreshments to its membership.

The statement that beer clubs are more numerous in "wet" towns than in "dry" ones is recklessly made. The reverse is true, and it is obviously true. There is no incentive to the formation of mere drinking clubs when the less expensive "public" is convenient.

We will not argue the Sabbath observance proposition with the organ of prohibition save to say that we are not opposed to a decent and orderly Sunday, but very much in favor of it. We are only opposed to carrying the Sabbath observance movement to ridiculous lengths.

Neither do we think it is necessary to enter a denial of the statement that the Connelville papers are at-ways on the wrong side of every moral question while the virtuous papers of Uniontown are always on the right side. With a modesty which we trust is not unbecoming, we must firmly insist that the Connelville papers are not always evil nor the Uniontown papers always good.

But it is the most natural thing in the world for a Uniontown newspaper to claim a monopoly of virtue for the Uniontown press; in fact, there is nothing too absurd for the Uniontown whoopets to claim. They even claim to be the Center of the Connelville coke region, and it has always been their custom to speak of themselves, especially about primary election time, as We, the People of Fayette County.

DEMOCRACY'S SORRY PLIGHT.

"What is a Democrat?" asks William Randolph Hearst, and thus doth William make reply:

"A Democrat is a member of a party without hope, without principles, without leaders, without organization."

"A party that was radical in 1900, conservative in 1904 and now sits stiff and motionless, holding its breath lest it commit itself either way."

"A party that is led in the House of Representatives by a railroad lawyer, and in the National Senate by a convicted agent of the Standard Oil Company and is represented by a professional gambling house keeper as Chairman of its National Committee."

The Democratic party of Jefferson and Jackson is certainly in a sad plight. It could not be recognized by the shades of the fathers if they were to return. But it has been saved from at least one additional misfortune, namely, the domination of the Yellow Kid.

Its members can console themselves with the reflection that it might have been worse.

The blood of the Rooster Barons has burst forth at Harrisburg.

The builder of the Homeless 26 was a criminal too, and it seems that he learned the business on the State Capitol.

That alleged train robbery was a steal out of the whole cloth.

Swift as it is, even Uniontown will not tolerate reckless driving. That anybody should drink Connelville will stand for it is hard to believe.

Cashier Rinehart will hold court in Greene county next week.

A. Carnegie never visited Connelville, but report says he is stuck on Mud Island.

The Somerset marine who attempted to divorce in a day coach probably thought somebody objected to his uniform.

Snydertown has a church and all the Shyders will now be good. Editor Likins will please note.

The special delivery stamp is reported to be on its last legs. Run to death, probably.

varies from 1 to 2 1/2 inches. The name bearing-in has been applied because this bench is chosen by the miner as the easiest layer on which to work to undercut the overlying coal. The bearing-in coal is thrown out in muling. An average analysis of the Amity Quadrangle is given as follows:

Moisture	1.68
Volatiles Matter	25.95
Picked Carbon	75.95
Ash	5.36
Sulphur	1.12
Phosphorus	.0051

The sulphur, however, is variable as noted above. It is highest in the northern part on Charles creek and lowest in the southern part on the Pittsburgh-Westmoreland tract. Whether you buy here or else where you owe it to yourselves to become acquainted with the stock we have here. It will interest you and the prices will interest your pocketbook. Just one way for you to find out about this carpet stock and that is to ask your neighbor about the kind of carpets we have here, and then come and see the patterns and learn the prices. You'll find every piece of carpet in this store marked with the price in plain figures. We also call special attention to Stinson Tapestry carpet at $1.14 the yard, and Stinson Velvet Carpet at $1.25 the yard. These prices mean made, laid and finished.

9x12 Rugs.

An assortment of these here to show you that is larger than ordinarily at this time of the year. Tapestry Rugs as low as $12.00 and from that on up to the Stinson Tapestry at $22.00. Velvet Rugs at $2.00, Body Brussels Rugs at $25.00, $27.00 and $30.00. Bigelow Axminster Rugs at $27.00 and Wilton Rugs at $10.00 and $15.00 each. Straw Mattings.

Prices start at 20 cents the yard and from that on up to 75 cents. We show a line of patterns that we believe will interest you. Mattings that have quality and are priced right. We think we have bought matting this season in a way that we are in a position to save you money if you have a matting want. Glad to have you come in and examine these and see the prices at which they are marked and find out if this statement is not correct.

Vudor Shades.

for the porches. We are never able to get enough of these later in the season. We run out of some sizes and colors and are unable to get more. That's a hint to not be too long in placing your order for what you will need.

Ribbons at 25c the Yard.

On Tuesday, May 7th, we placed on sale about 2,000 yards of wide taffeta ribbon at 25 cents the yard. Regularly this quality would sell at 35 cents the yard, but if you will consider the present cost of silk it should sell for 50 cents the yard. White, black, pink and light blue, red and lavender.

MAN ARRESTED FOR FAST DRIVING.

Alleged to Have Knocked Negro Preacher Down and Lashed Him With Whip.

THEN RESISTED POLICEMEN.

Gave Forfeit for His Appearance Before Burgess A. D. Solson But Settled Case Brought Against Him by Rev. Tolson Thursday Evening.

Russell May was twice arrested for reckless driving on the streets Thursday evening. Officers Anderson and Mitts and one of the State Constabulary figured in the case. According to Anderson, and others who saw the affair, May drove down Pittsburgh street at a rate far from safe and collided with the Rev. John Tolson, a colored exhorter preaching in front of the Marlboro hotel. After almost knocking the Reverend over, May added insult to injury by striking him over the back with his whip. Anderson and Mitts gave chase but not until May had driven about for 15 or 20 minutes was he finally rounded up in front of the Arlington hotel. Anderson climbed into the buggy but the party only drove a few yards before May resisted arrest. A hand to hand fight occurred, but the prisoner finally went to the lockup where he left a forfeit for his appearance before Burgess Solson.

In the meantime Rev. Tolson went before Judge Peck and made information against May. At the hearing the matter was settled. May paying the costs and promising good behavior. He will likely get a hearing before Burgess Solson this evening on the charge of reckless driving and resisting arrest preferred by the officers.

New Castle, Pa., May 10.—Miss Mary Lynch of 10 Aliquippa street, Pittsburg, shot herself with suicidal intent here. She died within a few minutes. Melancholia resulting from the death at Pittsburg last December of her mother was the cause.

Chillicothe, May 10.—One man was killed, one fatally and two others seriously injured in a rear end collision at Jones station, seven miles south of Hamilton. Three Children Bitten.

Ballot Boxes.
A number of primary ballot boxes are being shipped to down the river points in Westmoreland county through the Connelville office of the Adam Express Company. The boxes will be transferred to the United States Express Company here.

From Westmoreland's County Seat.

GREENSBURG, May 10.—Rev. Father Edward, O. S. B., pastor of the Church of the Most Holy Sacrament here, ably played the part of a detective hero yesterday when he caused the arrest of George Zisch, a clever German, who has been working an impostor game all over the country. The remarkable memory of Father Edward caused him to recognize Zisch as the same man who had cried to victimize him a year ago. Zisch is in jail charged with vagrancy and will get a court trial.

At the rectory yesterday afternoon he told a hardluck story. He said he was an electrical engineer, and had been in latrobe looking for work. Because the superintendent was away he was refused the job. His money gave out here, and he asked for a loan to get to Pittsburg. Knowing the man from previous experience, Father Edward sent Father Matthew for a policeman. Zisch was arrested, and fled mightily at a hearing before Justice of the Peace J. F. Bontly. Priests all over the country will be warned against the man. He operated his scheme successfully at St. Bede's monastery in Illinois and at St. Mary's in Allegheny.

The last case in the special session of Common Pleas court was disposed of last evening. Orla Banghman was awarded $40 damages from William C. Byers. This suit was brought to recover damages for breach of warranty in a deed of a farm sold to the plaintiff by the defendant, the plaintiff alleging that the coal had been sold out from under the farm without notice to him and without reservation in the deed.

In the case of William Hunter vs. May A. Hunter, a proceeding in ejectment for eighteen acres of land in Pleasant township, the jury awarded the land to William Hunter, deciding that his interpretation of the late John Galloway was the correct one.

A REAL CIRCUS.

Will Be Hagenbeck & Wallace Shows
On May 21.

Within recent years there has been a noticeable revolution in the methods employed in the management of circuses. In former years the promises of a circus man were considered worthless, and the statement of circus advertisements were invariably discredited.

This is changed now. The modern circus is, as a rule, in the hands of worthy and honorable men, they are reliable and agreeable in business relations. The greatest and most satisfactory change is in the line of advertising. The Carl Hagenbeck & Great Wallace Shows Combined are advertised to appear in Connelville May 21. They advertise that they will present certain new and marvelous acts. They name the performers, picture and describe the acts and people can go to the show expecting to see everything as advertised. It is not a question of whether or not Hagenbeck & Wallace will show all they advertise, as people have learned that this show is an amusement bargain counter, that the Hagenbeck & Wallace circus invariably exhibits a great deal more than advertised.

Italians Supplant Americans.

Canton, O., May 10.—There is trouble among the workmen at the McKinley monument. The New York firm of landscape gardeners who have the contract for beautifying the grounds at the memorial brought in a gang of Italian laborers from Cleveland to take the places of American laborers. The American laborers have been receiving $2 a day for nine hours work. The New York firm wanted them to work 10 hours a day. The men refused and the Italians were brought here to take their places. The Italians work 10 hours a day for $1.75. Representatives of the American Federation of Labor point out that American labor contributed a large amount of the monument and American labor should have the preference in the work.

Don't forget to send in your coupons for the Pony Contest.

MEYERSDALE.

Local and Personal Mention from the Big Somerset County Town.

MEYERSDALE, May 9.—Engineer Thomas Cowles of Connelville spent the day here calling upon friends and acquaintances. For a year or more Mr. Cowles was stationed here and his occasional appearance in our midst is hailed with joy by all who know him.

Walter May, who holds the position of brakeman on one of the through passenger trains and who for the past three weeks has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. May, departed for his home in Pittsburg today to take charge of his run. An alarm of fire was sounded today at noon, and the fire department responded promptly. The cause of the alarm was a burning chimney on the residence of Joseph Daugherty, on High street. After from a small hole in the roof no further damage was done.

Since the death recently of Alonzo Chamberlain, who was the oldest male resident in town, the gold-headed cane provided for the oldest male citizen by the late Rev. W. T. The New Exclusive Shoe Store

To People Who Are Not "Well Off."

THERE are many ways of furnishing a home, even if you are not well fixed in money matters. Some are desirable ways, others are not. One way is to furnish the whole home with cheap furniture, costing but little money and lasting not much longer than the money. Another way is to buy one or two good pieces of furniture at a time, gradually completing the home as your cash permits. It's a better way than the first but it's tedious and doesn't make a very comfortable home. The other way is what we call

"The Aaron Way"

IT consists of buying the very best of furniture—the kind you won't be ashamed to have your visitors see—the kind that will last a lifetime—buying everything you need for your home—thus getting the home life and home comforts immediately. But, you, you protest, how about paying for it? There's the point. There's where "The Aaron Way" comes in. We don't ask you to pay for it all at once—don't expect you to pay any more than you can pay conveniently each week or month. You don't need to do any worrying. Let us do it, if there's any to be done

Why Not Try "The Aaron Way?"

AARON credit is clean credit, dignified credit—the kind that doesn't sacrifice your self respect. You'd be surprised to know how many of your neighbors buy "The Aaron way." And you're just as welcome to its conveniences as they are. Come, get your home fixed up for spring and summer. Try "The Aaron Way."

There's No Red Tape About It

WE make no confusing or unnecessary provisions in our dealings with credit customers. Our plan is as simple as a, b, c. In fact there's no plan about it—you simply buy all you want—the best on earth is here to select from—and then pay for it in bits, as you can. We will show you by our treatment that we value your trade, that we want you to become customers of ours for life. We consider your patronage as a favor to us. We show our appreciation by favoring you in every possible way. It's an "even break." No obligations on either side. Just a simple business deal. Come and try "The Aaron Way."

Just for Comparison.

We will ask you to look over the following prices, then compare with what you are paying. If you find we can save you money, why not change your account to our store? For a DOLLAR SAVED is a DOLLAR EARNED.

A South Bend Watch on the Way to the North Pole

A dash of more than a thousand miles in an arctic over bleak and frozen arctic wastes; a change from summer heat to bitter cold; exposure to every variation of temperature, position and altitude and the fact that the watch is a test of time-keeping that in the opinion of Walter Wellman can be met by just one watch—The South Bend Watch.

After careful investigation, every man of the five composing the Wellman arctic expedition to the north pole, the most remarkable expedition in the history of arctic exploration, has been equipped with a South Bend Watch.

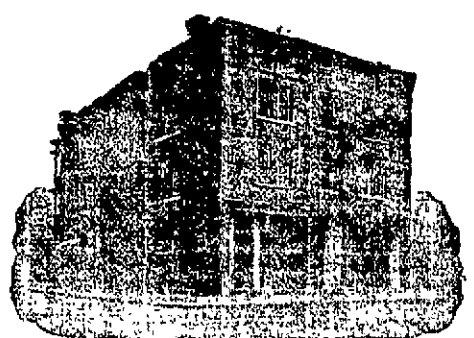

SOUTH BEND WATCH CO., SOUTH BEND, IND.

Because every South Bend Watch is so made and tested as to be accurate under strains that other watches might not stand, it is the best watch for you, for ordinary everyday use. A watch that will keep time frozen in ice or boiled in water is not likely to vary under any treatment it will receive at your hands.

We guarantee them to be satisfactory time-keepers. South Bend Watches are only sold by first-class dealers. They will explain to you how, through the wonder-ful South Bend Balance Wheel, a South Bend Watch adjusts itself to every temperature automatically.

IF YOU WERE OFFERED $500.00 FOR THE USE OF $100.00 FOR ONE YEAR

Would You Accept the Proposition? Of Course You Would.

Then why don't you invest in stock of the Braddock Gold Mining & Milling Company, which is bound to reap as big a profit as the above, with every chance of its being much larger?

You are not dealing with unfair or unscrupulous men when you buy stock in this company. The company is composed of business and professional men of Braddock, Pa., whose veracity and integrity you can prove to be of the highest by an hour's investigation. These men are firmly convinced that they have struck a veritable bonanza in their gold claims in the famous Thunder Mountain District of Idaho. The assays of the ore taken from the property as work now being done progresses, has verified their strongest expectations. It's no longer a question of finding the gold—it's only a question of raising sufficient capital to push development work. Much of the required amount has already been raised. A little more only is needed, hence you are offered the chance to share in this great money-making investment. Now is the time to grasp the opportunity while the stock is only 20 cents per share. Think of the handsome income you'll enjoy in a year or two if you are the owner of a block of this stock! You'll never miss the money expended for it now. It's a better insurance than any of the usual kind ever written. It will pay you a hundred fold better interest on your money than you can secure from a savings bank. Investigate our proposition thoroughly, and our word for it, you will buy some of this stock. But you have got to act quickly if you want some of it.

"No. That you must leave."

"You said I was to take anything I liked."

"Well, it's true I hope never to have to wear it again. I shall not want it in my grave, and that's where I hope to go. Oh, old! The sooner the better. And the poor girl broke down completely."

"Stuff and nonsense, miss! And see here," he said, "if you've got to do when you want to wear what you like, and I'll lend you any one of 'em you like and welcome! Now, then, what do you think of me now?"

And Claire, looking up through her tears, saw the woman decked out already, rings in her ears and on her finger, the brooch and pendant gleaming and glittering on her black stuff dress, and a quiet smile upon her wicked face. Claire could almost have smiled herself.

"And for these you'll hold your tongue until after the trial?"

"Oh, all's blue, you mean? I should think I would—and do anything you like, miss, to lead a hand."

Her mistress leaped to her feet, a living flame.

"Then put those things in your pocket and be out of my sight! Now—now—before I sacrifice him for a dead like you!"

And this was how Claire was followed along her narrow ledge by one who might push her from it at any moment, so that she had now not only her own feet to watch, but the treacherous hand behind her back as well.

CHAPTER XI.

A DAY or two before the trial, when Bassett called at the prison, Tom handed him a little, broken backed card, and the speaking eye, that had been dull and dumb for six long days, was once more eloquent with light and life. Bassett took the card gingerly between an offended finger and thumb and examined it with a critical brow. It was a pawn ticket for a suit of clothes.

"Well, my dear fellow, and what have I to do with this?"

"Show it to my friend and pray him, in my name, to add to all his other noble kindnesses by redeeming me these things. It will be the greatest kindness of all."

"What! To find you a change of clothes?"

"No; to help me look a gentleman at my trial. For months and months I haven't cared a rush what I looked, but once I did, and I do now. It came back to me last night when I found that pawn ticket in this old waistcoat pocket. I could hardly sleep for thinking what a sight I should be in court as I am. Oh, sir, you despair of saving me. I have seen it in your face all along. Then save my self respect, and I shall be as grateful as it were my life. It was his self respect that had come back to him in the night."

The clothes arrived next morning—a brown frock coat with three light lappets, velvet waistcoat and Cossack trousers with straps.

The first witness was the mechanic who had discovered the body. His testimony was very short. He had run straight for the police, leaving the blood stained culvert precisely where he had found it in the grass. This witness was not cross examined, and the police officer whom he had summoned soon replaced him in the box.

When the finding of the body and its exact position when found had been duly demonstrated to the satisfaction of the court, and counsel for the defense had put a couple of questions, counsel for the crown informed his lordship that he proposed to take the medical evidence later. He would now trace the prisoner's connection with the crime, adducing in the first place what he conceived to be an adequate motive for its commission. Mr. Richard Vale was thereupon called, but added little to the evidence which he had given at Marylebone. The only difference was a cross examination more rough and less telling, in which the prisoner's admissions were accompanied with a dissipated smirk, but which elicited no essential point in the prisoner's favor.

On the other hand, this witness was again the peg upon which were hung the threatening letters. The letters were once more indisputed, and a passage in one of them caused the first sensation of the trial. "I warn you," ran the text, "that I would rather hang than starve. Unless you pay me I shall do one or the other, and don't you rely on dodging me much longer, for I am hunting you day and night and will do till I drop." The dead man's landlady and a club porter gave supplementary evidence. The latter had forwarded the letters to deceased and had caused the police to put a stop to prisoner's loitering near the club.

Now came a workman whose face Tom had quite forgotten, but he swore to the prisoner as one of the two men to whom he had said good night as he passed them at the stile in the Finchley road on the night of Thursday, the 27th ult. about half past five, and it seemed that at the instant he had sworn to deceased as the other.

Tom's old friend and enemy, the hackney coachman, first swore to the prisoner as the man who had stopped his coach overnight and was then examined as to the entertainment of prisoner in his house next morning and his ultimate flight therefrom. Tom saw his counsel's eyelids twitching before he rose, and he anticipated at least of the three successive points now scored in his favor.

"When the prisoner sat at your breakfast table," began Cullford, "did you then or at any subsequent moment notice anything in the nature of a blood stain upon his clothes or person?"

"No, sir; I can't say that I did."

"Can you say that you did not?"

Witness hesitated, but told the truth. "No," said he; "I saw no signs of blood upon him either then or afterwards."

"You saw no signs of blood upon the prisoner either then or afterwards, nor quite positive, however, that the man who waylaid your fare in the Finchley road was the prisoner in the dock?"

"Quite positive."

"Then didn't you recognize him in the morning when your brother-in-law brought him to your house?"

"No, sir; I did not."

"What! Not when he was sitting at your own breakfast table?"

"I did not."

"Nor yet when you gave him the newspaper and he read you an account of the very crime with which he stands indicted? You suspected nothing, saw nothing suspicious in his manner, nothing familiar in his face?"

"No; not then I didn't."

"You suspected nothing and did not recognize him then, yet at a word from your wife you identified the prisoner with the man who stopped your coach, and you have so identified him ever since?"

Witness made the necessary admission, but attempted to explain matters, whereupon Cullford cut him short, and having gained the advantage which Tom had foreseen, passed on to one that was less apparent.

"To return to your fare," said counsel. "Did you notice any valuables upon his outer person? A watch chain? Rings? A breastpin in the stock?"

"I saw a watch chain and a pin—a diamond pin."

Mr. Sergeant Cullford sat down unexpectedly, but with an expression so satisfied that Tom lost much of the next evidence (that of the cookman's wife) in endeavoring to account for it. He had not succeeded when the court adjourned for luncheon, for the hour of acute perception was over and had left him dazed so that the remarkable turnkey who had charge of him in the dock had to take him by the arm to make him leave it.

The principal witnesses of the afternoon were Mrs. Adeock, Jonathan Butterfield and the diminutive householder of Kew. Thus the trio who had made the world seem so kind a fortnight before now typified its cruelty, for the evidence of the first two was reluctant but damning and that of the last was supplementary in matter, but given with the officious venom and the transparent exultation of a personal foe.

But his old landlady shed tears as she described her last interview with the prisoner at the bar. It was with difficulty that things which Tom had said on that occasion and to which he had already sworn at Marylebone could be wrung a second time from her unwilling lips. "I'll pay him" and "I'll break every bone in his infernal body" were not the words of the words which were extracted by degrees. Then the stick was produced in court, and the knob that had been so clean and creamy was now clothed over with a scaly, russet skin, like the skin of a snake, and the witness turned as white as her hair and was given a glass of water in the box. The stick was then duly identified, the jury informed that the prisoner had described it to witness as "a rod in pickle" for the deceased and the witness allowed to stand down after a brief but painful cross examination, in which the good will's fondness for Tom was betrayed by signs that touched him as deeply as anything could just then. His brain was reeling under the dread weight of her evidence against him. He felt its influence upon judge and jury as a palpable force. His very reluctance only heightened its mortal effect.

Jonathan Butterfield exhibited a like demeanor with a like result. It only showed that the prisoner had not lacked those common attributes of the worst rascals, an engaging manner and the power of imposing on the simple minded. This witness, however, swore very positively that there were no marks of blood upon the prisoner when they were together. And though his ally successor as positively swore that such a stain upon the horseman's waistcoat had first aroused his suspicions in the garden at Kew, and though this was afterward proved in the medical evidence to be a blood stain, it was eventually established that the blood was not that of the murdered man. The point was finally gained in cross examination of the police officer upon whom Tom had jumped bodily in his escape from the empty house. Witness admitted having opened his eyes to find the prisoner leaning over him with a bloody nose. At it the defense had scored once more, but this after an interval so prolific of incriminating matters that Mr. Sergeant Cullford sat down with a sigh instead of a smile, and the prisoner at the bar looked incontinently for the end.

The next day the trial was concluded. Ericson was convicted.

CHAPTER XII.

TOM was thrust into a condemned cell measuring but six by six feet and in height a foot less than its length. Yet even this hole he was to share with a comrade in like calamity. And in a drizzle of summer twilight, as the massive door clanged behind him, he found himself shut up with a young Indian, condemned for murder, with whom he had had an altercation over a trifling matter in chapel yard.

The recognition was mutual, and Tom held out his hand.

His hand was taken with an evil grace. To a little, however, the other loosened a not unfriendly tongue, but one so blasphemous and so foul that Tom half regretted his advance. He could not regret it altogether. The vilest conversation was better just then than none at all. That of Tom's willow enemy was vile enough, with his horrid levity, his coarse swagger and a forced but blood-urging contempt of death. Still, it was something to listen to something new to think about and shudder over, and the creature, having been alone at night since his conviction on the opening day of the sessions, hardly paused till the small hours of the morning.

His name was Creasey. He had been convicted of stabbing his wife. He was twenty years of age, but had never done it; 'twas a pack of lies. But he boasted to Tom of many a thing he had done in his short life, and they were such crimes as Tom never forgot in his. He lay listening and shuddering upon his bed. Yet when the other seemed to have talked himself out of his own torments only began and he was grateful when the brute broke out afresh. So the night wore on until 1 or 2 in the morning. Then there was a long, unbroken silence, then a sobbing and a shaking and a burst of frantic prayer from Creasey's bed; then quiet, then snoring, and the bell of St. Sepulcher's marking the weary milestones of the night.

Tom never slept a wink.

Next morning in the bottom day room, which the condemned prisoners had the use of during the day, he rubbed shoulders with a third convict under recent sentence of death, but this was a heavy, sullen, middle aged man of the name of Carter, who sat all day with his huge head between his cruel hands and spoke to nobody, nor did either youth venture to speak to him.

Overhead, there was another room and eleven more prisoners under sentence of death, but these were morally certain of reprieve and could be heard playing leap frog and larking and singing from morning till night.

"I wish we were up there," said Creasey mournfully. "It would suit the yards for us the same as for them when it's exercise time, and then there'll be a bit of fun for us all."

The bit of fun assayed by Creasey was openly to incite the eleven jovial spirits from upstairs to badger Tom and put him in a rage. But by this time Ericson's reputation in Newgate was such that the plot fell through for want of supporters. Tom shrugged his shoulders at the petty treachery and was treated by Creasey with a sly servility when they were locked up to gether once more. Meanwhile the burden of the day had been lightened by several visitors and as many private interviews.

Mr. Macmurdo, the surgeon, and Mr. Cotton, the ordinary of Newgate, had both shown Tom the kindest attentions. He could see, however, that each regarded him as a man only too justly sentenced to death. The surgeon offered to use his influence in the matter of a separate cell at night.

"No, no," said he; "it would be a poor kindness, though I thank you with all my heart for the thought. The greatest ruffian in the jail would be a better friend to me than my own reflections. Ah, I see what you think!"

cried Tom as a queer light glimmered in the surgeon's eyes. "Well, I have done protesting my innocence, but don't let them leave me by myself, that's all I ask."

Mr. Cotton entered into the spiritual matters, to which Tom listened courteously, though chiefly out of loving respect for his dear father's memory, for where was the God who would permit an innocent man to suffer death for another's crime? When, however, the good chaplain closed his books he referred discreetly as he rose to accept of Tom's thanks, to the fact that he was a matter of course.

"Why should you, sir," asked Tom deferentially, "when you are quite convinced of my guilt?"

The chaplain colored.

"I never said I was convinced," he cried. "It is no part of my duty to be convinced in such matters either way. No, my poor fellow, your guilt or your innocence is a matter between your own heart and God Almighty. I, his servant, am only concerned with your immortal soul, and the longer you live the more time will be yours for repentance—of all your sins—and the greater your chances of immortal life. But build upon nothing of the kind! And with a parting exhortation the ordinary went his way."

THE MASK OF HEALTH.

Few People Are Really as Well as They Look—Cause and Remedy. Many people in Connellsville, both men and women, who believe themselves to be in perfect health are often in the greatest danger.

The most common cause of ill health is indigestion, with a myriad of symptoms, such as headache, sleeplessness, specks before the eyes, pains in the back and side, distress after eating, etc.

In the last few years the success of physicians everywhere with Mott's stomach tablets has made them known far and wide as the acknowledged specific for the treatment of stomach diseases. They strengthen the digestive organs so that in a few days the stomach is in such shape that it takes care of itself of all the food that is eaten without pain or distress.

A. A. Clarke gives an absolute unqualified guarantee that your money will be refunded unless Mott's cures. He takes the whole risk and the remedy will not cost you a penny unless it cures you.

WILLIAMS RESIGNS
Star Capitol Witness Quits as Secretary of Board of Trade.

Harrisburg, May 10.—S. Marshall Williams of Pittsburgh has resigned as secretary of the Pennsylvania state board of trade. Williams testified before the capital investigation commission that he borrowed $10,000 from a national official during the last gubernatorial campaign in Pennsylvania after he had made threats to expose how he was cheating out of the $2,000,000 contract for the lighting fixtures of the new capitol.

He admitted that he had borrowed the money on an unindorsed note when he was insolvent and refused to deny that it had been given to him by Congressman H. Burr Cassell of Marietta, president of the Pennsylvania Construction Co., which supplied $2,500,000 worth of metallic furniture for the capitol. Williams claimed the money was used in the campaign for a two-cent fare and other legislation in which the board was interested.

PREPARE FOR TROUBLE
Shipbuilding Company Will Try to Break Strike at Cleveland.

Cleveland, May 10.—Active steps are being taken by the American Shipbuilding Co. to resume work at the Globe yards here, the coming week. Cots were hauled into the building and preparations made for a food supply.

Since the inauguration of the strike in the company's yards along the Great Lakes only a few men have been employed here, the construction department having been practically abandoned. The officials of the company, it is declared, will apply the same methods here as were employed in re-opening the yards at Lorain and Wyandotte, where their yards are now in operation. Strikebreakers may be imported Sunday.

Revolt Threatened in India.
Lahore, British India, May 10.—Everything seems to point to the imminence of a native outbreak here and the authorities are taking all the steps possible to suppress it by force of arms. The political unrest is hourly assuming graver proportions.

SENATE A CEMETERY.

Upper House Continue to Kill Measures Passed by House of Representatives.

EXPRESS TAX BILL THE LATEST

Death of General Samuel M. Jackson. Announced and Committee Appointed to Attend Funeral—Was Born of Gettysburg and Spotsylvania.

Harrisburg, May 10.—The Pennsylvania legislature is working day and night getting ready to adjourn finally on May 16. The calendars of both senate and house are crowded with bills which must be gotten out of the way. The great majority of the appropriation bills will be passed and sent to the governor by Saturday.

Several important bills passed by the house have either been reported adversely in the senate or have not yet been acted upon by the committees of that body. The bill taxing express companies was reported adversely and similar action will probably be taken on the employers' liability bill and the "trust busting" bill. The Dunsmore state railway commission bill will be taken up by the senate for second reading today, and final passage on Monday. It will go back to the house for concurrence in the house amendments on Monday when the amended trolley eminent domain bill will be taken up by the senate for final passage.

The bill fixing a maximum passenger fare of five cents a mile on all railroads not more than 40 miles long was defeated on final passage in the house, 5 to 65. This was the second defeat for this bill, the previous vote having been considered.

The bill providing that all executions for murder be isolated was defeated on final passage 78 to 61. The bill providing for two hanging places, one to be built by the authorities of each penitentiary on a secluded spot, the executions to be in the presence of no one but a jury of a dozen men, with not more than two physicians and two clergymen.

Jackson's Death Announced. Mr. Cochran of Armstrong announced the death of General Samuel M. Jackson, former state treasurer, and offered a resolution of regret which provided for 10 members of the house as honorary pallbearers. The resolution was adopted and the speaker appointed Messrs. Cochran and Sadwick of Armstrong; Elder of Allegheny, Watson of Indiana, Sullivan and McAdoo of Westmoreland, McJunkin of Butler, Cressy of Columbia, McIntyre of Mercer and Brown of Clarion.

The general appropriation bill was passed finally 145 to 7, several other amendments being offered but withdrawn for insertion in the senate so as not to delay the passage of the bill.

The house was in committee of the whole for two hours amending the Habgood child labor bill. The maximum number of working hours in any one week for women and children under 16 years of age was reduced from 60 to 58, and the hours between which such child shall work were changed from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m. and from 8 p. m. to 6:30 a. m. The provision that boys not less than 14 years of age could be employed at night when the conditions of manufacture made it necessary was struck out.

Child Labor Bill Doctored. The provisions for employment certificates to be issued under the jurisdiction of the department of factory inspection were struck out and in lieu of them were inserted provisions from the Townsend bill that such certificates be under the jurisdiction of the department of public instruction.

Another amendment provides that suits under the act may be brought by deputy officers of schools as well as by the deputy factory inspectors. Governor Stuart has signed the concurrent resolution making application to congress for the calling of a convention to amend the federal constitution so as to prohibit polygamy and polygamous marriages.

The senate and house adopted a resolution recalling from the governor or the bill increasing the compensation of members of the legislature from $750 to $1,500 a year. The resolution was approved by the governor and the bill was laid on the table. Mr. Roberts of Montgomery, author of the bill, explained that it was recalled for the purpose of correcting defects in its phraseology.

FOUND DEAD IN WELL

Aged and Wealthy Farmer May Have Been Murdered.

Zanesville, O., May 10.—Foul play is suspected in connection with the finding of the body of Edward Wetherall, an aged and wealthy farmer, in a well at his home near Stockport, O. At the coroner's inquest it developed that Wetherall and his young wife, 35 years old, have not been living together happily. A brother and son-in-law of the dead man testified that they had searched the well the day after the man's disappearance without finding anything. The coroner removed the stomach of the dead man and will send it to Columbus to have its contents analyzed.

MEN'S WORKING DAYS.

They Are Usually Limited to a Certain Period.

Most men live to see the day when their earning capacity is exhausted. During their productive years they must save sufficient to support them when their working days are over, otherwise, in their old age, they become dependent upon relatives or the community in which they live. That is an excellent reason why every man should have a savings account and an excellent reason for having it at the First National Bank of Connelville, because that institution is big and strong and safe and allows 4 per cent compound interest on all savings accounts.

ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY (Incorporated)

In Retrospect.

IT IS with extreme satisfaction that we look over our business records of the past three years.

Three years that have witnessed the development and growth of our business to such a marked degree as to cause even the most pessimistic to acknowledge that in this short space of time we have attained a position that is enviable.

IT IS EXACTLY THREE YEARS AGO MAY 6 THAT THE FORMAL OPENING OF THIS ESTABLISHMENT WAS CELEBRATED, and it is due purely to our straightforward business principles and modern methods of conducting our business that we have been able to so thoroughly establish our position at the head of the retail merchandising in Fayette county.

The Things we Have Not Done.

We have never misrepresented a value. We have never insulted the intelligence of our public by professing to sell merchandise below cost at the height of the season.

We have never belittled competition. We have never made boastful claims that were obviously untrue.

We have never slighted a detail of our business that would in any little way add to the comfort or convenience of our patrons.

The Things We Have Done.

In three short years we have placed this establishment at the head of Fayette County's retail merchandising. This has been accomplished by upright business methods.

We have offered you merchandise strictly new at all times. This has been made possible by semi-annual clearance sales conducted in January and July of each year.

We have offered values the potency of which is made obvious by our rapid growth.

We are doing a most satisfactory business and still have never told you that we were selling a single article for less than it cost us.

Our success is due alone to the support of a discriminating public. A public that possesses a strongly developed sense of reason and whose thrift directs their every purchase.

We appreciate thoroughly the strong public approval that our rapid development testifies and in the years to come will put forth every effort to deserve a continuance of the patronage that has been alone responsible for our past success.
